MEMBERSHIP OF PROFESSIONAL ORGANISATIONS

FUNERAL DIRECTORS ASSOCIATION OF NEW ZEALAND

The Funeral Directors Association of New Zealand (FDANZ) est. in 1937 is an association of funeral directing companies carrying out over 80% of funerals in New Zealand – a group of caring professionals who are committed to ensuring that the families they serve are receiving high quality service.

The absence of legislation governing the provision of funeral services means anyone can set up as a funeral director. There are people who do this without experience or training, appropriate vehicles, premises, or the skills to provide care, support, and the attention you and the deceased deserve.

You can depend on the integrity of a FDANZ funeral director. There is a minimum premises and facilities requirement that all FDANZ members must offer in order to deliver professional funeral services. Refer to www.fdanz.org.nz for further information.

NEW ZEALAND EMBALMERS ASSOCIATION

The New Zealand Embalmers Association (NZE) is a group of like-minded, professional, qualified embalmers dedicated to the maintenance of the highest standards of professional conduct and ability. Only individuals who hold a recognised qualification in embalming practices are open to membership of NZEA. Membership ensures the strictest adherence to the association's code of ethics and New Zealand law.

NZE is committed to providing the most up-to-date technology the world has to offer in mortuary services, so that members can take these skills back to their provinces and offer them to the bereaved families they serve. The association continues to urge the government to recognize embalming as a profession that should be practised only by suitably qualified individuals. Refer to www.nzembalmers.org.nz for further information.

GEE & HICKTON FUNERAL DIRECTORS

Gee & Hickton has supported families across the Wellington region since 1946. Our four modern, light-filled funeral homes in Lower Hutt, Upper Hutt, Porirua and Akatarawa are designed to be welcoming, calm spaces where decisions can be made with clarity and care. As proud members of the Funeral Directors Association of New Zealand (FDANZ), we combine local knowledge and relationships with professional standards, training and resources.

Families tell us what matters most is feeling heard. That's why our first question is always, 'What would feel right for your loved one?' From there we design a farewell that's true to them, whether traditional, contemporary, faith-based or secular, while taking care of the many moving parts so you don't have to.

We also recognise that grief is as individual as the person who has died. Some families want a large, formal service; others prefer an intimate gathering, a private cremation followed by a celebration later, or a simple time of reflection at home. Whatever shape your goodbye takes, we will outline clear options, transparent costs and realistic timeframes, and we'll move at the pace that suits you.

Our role is to listen, guide, and provide dignified care 24/7 so you can focus on what really matters: remembering, supporting one another and beginning to heal.

OUR TEAM

Behind every thoughtfully arranged farewell is a team who cares about the small details as much as the big moments. Gee & Hickton's team of funeral directors and embalmers bring decades of combined experience across many cultures, faiths and family traditions.

A dedicated funeral director will gently guide and support you as your main point of contact, from the first call through to aftercare. They coordinate the people and places involved so the day flows calmly and everyone knows what to do and when.

Technical excellence matters too. Our qualified embalmers make sure that every detail is handled with care, allowing families to trust that the dignity and respect of the deceased is looked after every step of the way.

Our funeral team is known for clear communication, gentle guidance and practical problem solving: preparing paperwork, registering the death, drafting notices, designing service sheets, and setting up audio-visuals and livestreams. Above all, we aim to combine professionalism with warmth, steady hands and open hearts so you feel supported, informed and at ease.

We combine expertise with care so you feel supported, informed, and at ease.

WHY HAVE A FUNERAL?

A well-planned ceremony does more than mark a date; it helps grief begin to move. Participating in a funeral can counter the early effects of loss like shock, numbness and disbelief. Gathering with others reinforces the reality of what has happened, provides a safe place to share emotion, and creates a collective story about the person who has died. From our experience, families who allow time for a meaningful farewell, however simple, often say later they're glad they did, as it brought a sense of comfort.

Funerals are for the living and about the person we love. That's why we encourage personal touches: favourite music, objects from a workshop or garden, photos and films, readings in first languages, karakia and waiata, prayers, poetry and laughter.

Children and teens who want to be involved can place flowers, carry photos, or read a message. There are no strict rules; there is only what will be supportive and true.

If cost or timing is a concern, we can suggest modest, heartfelt options that still offer the benefits of coming together to honour a life.

PLANNING THE FUNERAL

Once you've told us what would feel right, we turn your preferences into a clear plan. Together we'll choose a date and venue, and decide who will lead: a celebrant, minister, imam, kaumātua, rabbi, another faith leader or a capable family member we can support. We'll prepare timeframes for content: when photos and music are needed for the service sheet and photo presentation, when final content is due for printing, and when flowers, audio-visual and catering will be confirmed.

Your funeral director will handle bookings and logistics, including vehicle movements, pallbearer briefing, arrival times for speakers and musicians, and livestream links for those in other parts of the country and overseas. We also liaise with cemetery teams and crematoria, manage medical certificates, and take care of legal requirements such as death registration. The plan is always flexible; if someone important needs to travel or you wish to add a ritual, we will adapt. Our goal is a service that feels unhurried and seamless so you can be fully present with whānau and friends.

PERSONALISING THE CEREMONY

Personalisation is how a service becomes 'theirs'. Many families build a service with treasured items, embroidered work, tools, recipes, awards, fishing gear, a jersey from a cherished club, a quilt, or vegetables from a backyard garden. Favourite flowers and colours can be reflected in the casket spray and venue styling.

Service sheets can feature photos across the decades, meaningful quotes or karakia, hymns or poems that hold meaning. If you'd like live elements, pipers, buglers, kapa haka groups, choirs or soloists can be arranged.

Symbols speak when words are hard. Candle lighting, laying of rosemary or poppies, guards of honour, the returning of a wedding ring, or placing handwritten notes into the casket are all powerful. For families choosing donations rather than flowers, we'll provide a collection box and links for online giving, then pass funds on to a chosen organisation.

We also prepare a memorial book ahead of the service, with printed pages for attendees to sign and leave messages, and provide a downloadable recording of the livestream where available. These keepsakes often become anchors for storytelling in the months ahead.

BURIAL & CREMATION CHOICES

Early in your contact with us you will be asked whether the person who has died had a wish to be buried or cremated. We ask this because it will determine the medical certificates required from the attending medical professional.

BURIAL

Burials can take place in existing plots if space allows or in a new plot. There are many options for burial and locations of meaning can be chosen by family members. Some examples of local cemeteries are Taita, Akatarawa, Whenua Tapu, and Mākara. There are many options however not all cemeteries have new plots available, we can assist with information on new burial plots, or research existing ones.

NATURAL BURIAL

In Wellington the Natural Burial Cemetery is located at Mākara Cemetery. A natural burial is a burial process that is as natural and environmentally friendly as possible. The person who has died is buried within the active soil layer, allowing for a natural decomposition process.

Only biodegradable materials are put in the ground and the surface is returned to a natural flora and fauna environment. Permanent headstones are not a feature of natural burial cemeteries, rather a native tree or plant is grown instead.

CREMATION

Cremation is now a widely accepted alternative to burial. Cremation allows many options – ashes may be buried, scattered in a special place, returned into the care of the family, or transported overseas. The cremation usually takes place on the day of the funeral service and ashes are available within 48 hours, or possibly sooner by arrangement. Gee & Hickton own the Akatarawa Crematorium so are able to assist families from the first call, to the final goodbye.

KEY INFORMATION ON CREMATION

Gee & Hickton own the Akatarawa Crematorium and have developed and uphold the highest standards and processes throughout the cremation process. This means you can be assured that the ashes are only those of your loved one. There are also Council owned crematoriums, the Karori Crematorium (Wellington City Council) and the Whenua Tapu Crematorium (Porirua City Council).

In accordance with Greater Wellington Regional Council by-laws, every person is cremated in a casket – due to the nature of the process all the casket material disappears and the ashes returned are bone ash.

The choice of whether you wish to accompany the hearse to the crematorium is always up to the family. The thoughtfully designed chapel at Akatarawa is perfect for family wishing to have some intimate time together before the cremation takes place. The funeral director will be able to explain all your options.

EMBALMING & ENVIRONMENTAL CONSIDERATIONS

The care and respect that Gee & Hickton gives to those who have passed begins from your very first contact with us. Our entire team is fully trained to transfer your loved one into our care with dignity and respect, whether from a private home, rest home, hospital, or hospice.

Gee & Hickton will always respect the wishes of the deceased and their family. There are no legal or mandatory requirements in New Zealand for embalming. The only exception would be when a repatriation of the deceased requires airline transport, especially overseas.

Modern embalming fluids can be used in very low concentrations and are not harsh on the deceased person or environment. Our embalming practices follow the highest ethical standards and use the minimal amount of fluids required. All mortuary waste is managed in accordance with local by-laws and industry best practices. We are available to discuss any of our practices and answer any questions you may have at any time.

CLOTHING AND DRESSING

We will ask for clothing for the person who has died to be dressed in (including underwear), footwear is optional. Choose clothing that is familiar and relative to the deceased. Family are very welcome to assist with dressing. We encourage families to spend time with the person who has died and to see them once again in familiar clothing is often very comforting.

Please discuss your options with your funeral director.

CASKETS & URNS

A casket can be traditional or contemporary, simple or personalised. We offer solid timber, veneered and painted finishes, woven and environmentally conscious options, and custom motifs or colours that align with your loved one's style. You may choose to place letters, drawings, photographs or small keepsakes inside; we'll advise sensitively on what is appropriate for burial or cremation. For those wishing to decorate the casket, families sometimes write messages or have children add drawings at home or in our viewing room. It can be a healing activity.

If cremation is chosen, we provide urns and scatter tubes in timber, ceramic, metal and biodegradable materials. Some families select multiple small urns to share among siblings or to keep part of the ashes while interring or scattering the rest. We'll guide you on sizing and sealing, and, if you're planning to travel, we'll advise on airline and customs requirements for carrying ashes. Our focus is helping you choose something that feels right, looks right, and honours both the person and your family's values.

Explore our full range of casket and urn options on our website at geeandhickton.co.nz

VIEWING

Spending time with your loved one before the funeral can help with the grieving process, offering a chance to say goodbye and accept the reality of their passing. This time can be meaningful, whether through quiet reflection or leaving small mementos like letters, cards, or gifts. We provide private, comfortable viewing facilities at all our locations and can also arrange for the casket to be brought to your home prior to the funeral.

Dealing with the death of someone close is hard at any age, and children grieve too, though they may show it differently. Involving them, even in small ways, can help them feel included and honour the person who has died. Simple gestures like drawing a picture, writing a letter, or just being present can give them understanding, even if it takes time to process what has happened.

VENUES & FACILITIES

Each of our locations is designed with accessibility and comfort in mind: level access, flexible seating, quality sound, and screens for visuals.

After the ceremony, a reception space where people can eat, talk and reconnect is invaluable. We can provide catering on-site or coordinate with church or community groups. Dietary needs are easily accommodated.

If you are expecting a large turnout, we'll plan parking, ushers and directional signage and, where necessary, overflow seating or secondary streaming spaces. Our goal is to match venue and facilities to the tone of the day and the size of your gathering so comfort and care are felt throughout.

OTHER VENUES

In the Greater Wellington area, there are many beautiful and meaningful places to hold a funeral service beyond our own locations. Families often choose spaces such as the Lower Hutt Events Centre and Old St Paul's in Wellington. Community halls, clubs, and private venues can also provide a personal setting, and for something truly special, you might consider a home, garden, or favourite outdoor spot. Wherever you choose, we're here to help make it a comforting and memorable farewell.

AFTER THE FUNERAL: CONTINUING CARE

Although very important, the funeral is only the first step we take in 'saying goodbye'. As you begin to work through your grief, the road ahead may seem long and lonely. Relatives and friends will be especially helpful at the time of death and at the funeral. However, as the weeks and months pass after the death, they may not always be available to comfort you and to allow you to talk about the person you love and miss so much.

After the funeral, it's vital to allow time and space for grief, knowing that what you're feeling is normal and you're not alone. We're here to support you through this time, offering compassionate guidance and a range of helpful resources from grief support and advice to practical assistance so you don't have to face these early days without someone by your side.

REMEMBRANCE SERVICE

Each year, Gee & Hickton invite the families we have cared for to attend a Remembrance Service held in our chapels. It is usually held in early December and is a chance for people to gather and remember. We offer suggestions for coping with significant anniversaries as time passes. The positive comments from those who attend show the importance of this service and time together.

Other items may be included and will be itemised such as crematorium and cemetery fees, ashes and memorial fees, doctor's fees, newspaper notices, flowers, printing, catering, a death certificate, gratuities and donations, multimedia and audiovisual, and monumental options.

COMPASSIONATE AIRFARES

Some airlines operating in New Zealand offer compassionate airfares to immediate family members travelling to a funeral. You should check with the airline you are travelling on whether the ticket you are travelling on is able to be discounted in this way.

If a discount is possible, we can supply you with a supporting letter from our company.

To write our supporting letter we need the following:

- The full names of the people travelling;
- Proof of your relationship to the person who has died;
- Travel departure point and destination.

PRE-PLANNING

Planning ahead is a gift to your family. In a relaxed meeting we can record your preferences: burial or cremation, cultural rituals, music and readings, venue ideas, and people you'd like to speak.

You can complete our 'record your wishes' form at home or online and update it any time. We'll keep your plan safe on file and, with your permission, let your family know it exists so they can access it easily when needed.

We can meet you in person or online, and record your wishes together. We can also point you to practical and financial support.

PREPAID FUNERALS

We plan for nearly every financial eventuality we may face in life - investing for retirement and having health, house and contents insurance. Yet when it comes to funerals, many of us don't like to think about them, let alone plan for them in advance.

Planning and paying for your funeral in advance may seem a difficult task to face, but like making a will, the ideal time to make these plans is well beforehand, without worry or stress.

PREPAYMENT SERVICE

Experience has shown the need to be able to plan for funerals in advance. The Funeral Directors Association of New Zealand's Prepayment Service is a way of arranging your funeral in advance and setting funds aside at the same time.

BENEFITS OF THE PREPAYMENT SERVICE

- You are able to choose your own individual funeral service.
- Your family and friends are relieved of financial and some emotional burden.
- Peace of mind – knowing your affairs are in order.
- Flexibility – funeral arrangements can be altered if circumstances change.
- Should you move away from your current location, your plan is portable and an FDANZ funeral director anywhere in New Zealand may access the funds upon death.
- The money you prepay towards your funeral can be discussed with your FDANZ funeral director who will help tailor a funeral to suit your needs.
- Your wishes and preferences are carefully documented, and you receive a copy for your records.
- Prepayment Service funds are exempt from asset testing (under current government policy) when assessing eligibility for a subsidy for long-term residential care.

Feel free to visit their website at www.funeraldirectors.co.nz for further information.

WHAT TO BRING WITH YOU

Similar to requirements for setting up bank accounts or other major financial transactions the Prepayment Service must comply with anti-money laundering identification requirements. Below describes the identification that you will need to provide us to adhere to these requirements.

ACCEPTED FORMS OF IDENTIFICATION

- Passport (New Zealand or overseas)
- New Zealand Drivers Licence
- New Zealand Certificate of Identity
- International Driving Permit
- Firearms Licence
- Kiwi Access (18+) card
- Statutory Declaration of Identity

If you do not have any of the forms of identification above, please contact Gee & Hickton Funeral Directors and we can work together to gather information that will be acceptable.

The Prepayment Service administrator will need to check all documentation before your plan is set up. This means you won't be able to pay money in on the day you complete your application. Instead, once the paperwork is completed and the application approved by the Trustee, you'll receive an email advising how to make your first deposit.

Your funeral director will be able to help you understand the process and will also provide you with information about how to make additional future contributions.
